Foreword

The International Color Quality Club (ICQC) recognizes the best printed publications in the world. The club's members have demonstrated the capability to print in color at a consistent level according to the stringent conditions laid down by the International Organization for Standardization (ISO).

Since 1994, the World Association of News Publishers (WAN-IFRA) has organized this competition for entry into this prestigious club once every two years, supervised by the World Printers Forum (WPF), the print community within WAN-IFRA. In addition to newspapers, beginning with this edition, magazines are eligible to participate.

The quality evaluation is composed of two parts - an evaluation based on objective measurements made on a print test element (WAN-IFRA "Cuboid") that participants were required to print each day of a specified week per month for a period of three months; and a visual inspection of the general print quality by a jury of International newspaper experts. Participating companies had to meet the defined quality criteria and print without quality defects. This competition rewards those companies that not only print within approved international standards but also establish a foolproof system for print production.

More than a printing competition

Through their successful participation in the competition, the companies have demonstrated that they can supply print products of outstanding color quality for their readers and advertisers. The Color Quality Club is more than a technical printing competition because it offers participating companies the additional possibility to benchmark their printing quality against recognized International standards and improve it.

ICQC membership, once filled by leading newspaper titles of the West, began seeing winners from India early this in this century. The 23rd edition of the competition in 2018-2020 saw Indian newspaper titles emerge as the largest group in the club with a total of 15 winning titles, from 12 publishing and printing companies. Quite simply, they are "India's best printed newspapers," and they are profiled in the following pages.

A total of 67 publications, newspapers and magazines, produced by 54 publishing and printing companies in 20 countries achieved membership in the International Color Quality Club for this two-year period. Altogether, 121 publications from around the world participated in the latest competition.

Indian publications at their best

Increases in the numbers of participants and winners from India can be attributed to the pragmatic approach of Indian publishers. While print is declining in the West, Indian publishers have taken it upon themselves to not only sustain, but also grow their print businesses. By making their titles capable of printing high quality color, they have prepared themselves to be more attractive to advertisers and readers. Their efforts to participate in the International Color Quality Club competition is a testimony to this.

While participation in this competition is no easy task, as it involves time and resources to meet the demanding printing conditions, the benefits are manifold. Many publishers use the competition to benchmark their different print centres and create a healthy workplace. The competition also gives publishers the confidence to innovate and offer different kinds of printed products with very high print quality standards to advertising customers.

Sakshi newspapers from Jagati Group in Telangana State participated in the competition with all 22 of their centres and all the 22 publications won entry to the club, a rare distinction for a publisher and the first time it has happened in the 25 year history of the ICQC

ABP Pvt. Ltd., the printers of Anandabazar Patrika and The Telegraph and The Printers Mysore Ltd, the printers of Deccan Herald and Prajavani, both achieved "Star Club" membership for their consistent results over the years in the competition.

Star Club membership is presented to a printing company in recognition of outstanding print quality if it achieves five or more stars by participating successfully in the International Color Quality Club or by obtaining WAN-IFRA certification for standardised printing. One star is awarded for each successful ICQC participation in a competition year, independent of the number of successful entries, and two stars are awarded for successful WAN-IFRA certification of a printing plant. World wide, there are 49 Star Club members.

The next edition of the International Color Quality Club competition is now underway. The winners of the 2020-2022 edition will be announced during the last quarter of 2020. We hope the pages of this publication will swell with more Indian winners in the next edition. To all the winners, India's best printed newspapers, a salute and warm congratulations.

The Mathrubhumi Printing & Publishing Co Ltd.

The Mathrubhumi Daily, Thrissur

Mathrubhumi is one of the front-runners among the Malayalam newspapers. The first copy of Mathrubhumi was published on 18th of March 1923 -- the day before the first anniversary of Mahatma Gandhi's arrest for the first time by the British police. Led by K.P.Kesava Menon, the prominent freedom fighter, as Editor and K. MadhavanNair as Managing Director, Mathrubhumi was envisaged for spreading the message of the great National Movement. In the beginning, the paper was published a week and had just one edition from Kozhikode (Calicut). A newspaper born out of relentless passion of freedom fighters, Mathrubhumi went on to become an inalienable part of Kerala's social fabric.

Now with sixteen editions- ten in Kerala, ones in New Delhi, Mumbai, Bangaluru, Chennai, Dubai and Doha- it has an impressive circulation of over 1.5 million copies.
